THE NAMELESS MAN.

By RODRIGUES OTTOLENGUI.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

Mr. Barnes was sitting in his private room, with nothing of special importance to occupy his thoughts, when his office boy announced a visitor.

"What name?" asked Mr. Barnes.

"None," was the reply.

"You mean," said the detective, "that the man did not give you his name. He must have one, of course. Show him in."

A minute later the stranger entered, and bowing courteously began the conversation at once.

"Mr. Barnes, the famous detective, I believe?" said he.

"My name is Barnes," replied the detective. "May I have the pleasure of knowing yours?"

"I sincerely hope so," continued the stranger. "The fact is I suppose I have forgotten it."

"Forgotten your name?" Mr. Barnes scented an interesting case and became doubly attentive.

"Yes," said the visitor. "That is precisely my singular predicament. I seem to have lost my identity. That is the object of my call. I wish you to discover who I am. As I am evidently a full grown man, I can certainly claim that I have a past history, but to me that past is a blank. I awoke this morning in this condition, yet apparently in possession of all my faculties—so much so that I at once saw the advisability of consulting a first class detective, and upon inquiry I was directed to you."

"Your case is most interesting—from my point of view, I mean. To you, of course, it must seem unfortunate. Yet it is not unparalleled. There have been many such cases recorded, and for your temporary relief I may say that sooner or later complete restoration of memory usually occurs. But now let us try to unravel your mystery as soon as possible, that you may suffer as little inconvenience as there need be. I would like to ask you a few questions."

"As many as you like, and I will do my best to answer."

"Do you think that you are a New Yorker?"

"I have not the least idea whether I am or not."

"You say you were advised to consult me. By whom?"

"The clerk at the Waldorf hotel, where I slept last night."

"Then of course he gave you my address. Did you find it necessary to ask him how to find my offices?"

"Well, no, I did not. That seems strange, does it not? I certainly had no difficulty in coming here. I suppose that must be a significant fact, Mr. Barnes?"

"It tends to show that you have been familiar with New York, but we must still find out whether you live here or not. How did you register at the hotel?"

"M. J. G. Remington, city."

"You are sure that Remington is not your name?"

"Quite sure. After breakfast this morning I was passing through the lobby when the clerk called me twice by that name. Finally one of the hall boys touched me on the shoulder and explained that I was wanted at the desk. I was very much confused to find myself called 'Mr. Remington,' a name which certainly is not my own. Before I fully realized my position I said to the clerk, 'Why do you call me Remington?' and he replied, 'Because you registered under that name.' I tried to pass it off, but I am sure that the clerk looks upon me as a suspicious character."

"What baggage have you with you at the hotel?"

"None. Not even a satchel."

"May there not be something in your pockets that would help us—letters, for example?"

"I am sorry to say that I have made a search in that direction, but found nothing. Luckily I did have a pocketbook though."

"Much money in it?"

"In the neighborhood of $500."

Mr. Barnes turned to his table and made a few notes on a pad of paper. While so engaged his visitor took out a fine gold watch, and after glancing at the face was about to return it to his pocket when Mr. Barnes wheeled around in his chair and said:

"That is a handsome watch you have there. Of a curious pattern, too. I am rather interested in old watches."

The stranger seemed confused for an instant and quickly put up his watch, saying:

"There is nothing remarkable about it. Merely an old family relic. I value it more for that than anything else. But about my case, Mr. Barnes—how long do you think it will take to restore my identity to me? It is rather awkward to go about under a false name."

"I should think so," said the detective. "I will do my best for you, but you have given me absolutely no clew to work upon, so that it is impossible to say what my success will be. Still I think 48 hours should suffice. At least in that time I ought to make some discoveries for you. Suppose you call again on the day after tomorrow at noon precisely. Will that suit you?"

"Very well indeed. If you can tell me who I am at that time, I shall be more than convinced that you are a great detective, as I have been told."

He arose and prepared to go, and upon the instant Mr. Barnes touched a button under his table with his foot, which caused a signal bell to ring in a distant part of the building, no sound of which penetrated the private office. Thus any one could visit Mr. Barnes in his den and might leave unsuspicious of the fact that a spy would be awaiting him out in the street who would shadow him persistently day and night until recalled by his chief. After giving the signal Mr. Barnes held his strange visitor in conversation a few moments longer to allow his spy opportunity to get to his post.

"How will you pass the time away, Mr. Remington?" said he. "We may as well call you by that name until I find your true one."

"Yes, I suppose so. As what I shall do during the next 48 hours, why, I think I may as well devote myself to seeing the sights. It is a remarkably pleasant day for a stroll, and I think I will visit your beautiful Central park."

"A capital idea. By all means I would advise occupation of that kind. It would be best not to do any business until your memory is restored to you."

"Business? Why, of course I can do no business."

"No; if you were to order any goods, for example, under the name of Remington, later on, when you resume your proper identity, you might be arrested as an impostor."

"By George, I had not thought of that! My position is more serious than I had realized. I thank you for the warning. Sightseeing will assuredly be my safest plan for the next two days."

"I think so. Call at the time agreed upon and hope for the best. If I should need you before then, I will send to your hotel."

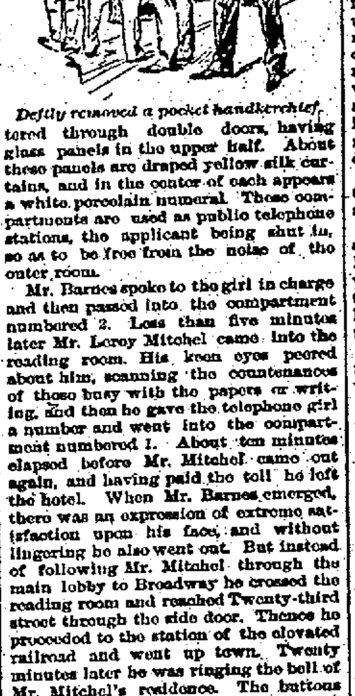
Then saying "Good morning," Mr. Barnes turned to his desk again, and as the stranger looked at him before stepping out of the room the detective seemed engrossed with some papers before him. Yet scarcely had the door closed upon the retreating form of his recent visitor when Mr. Barnes looked up with an air of expectancy. A moment later a very tiny bell in a drawer of his desk rang, indicating that the man had left the building, the signal having been sent to him by one of his employees, whose business it was to watch all departures and notify his chief. A few moments later Mr. Barnes himself emerged, clad in an entirely different suit of clothing and with such alteration in the color of his hair and beard that more than a casual glance would have been required to recognise him.

When he reached the street, the stranger was nowhere in sight, but Mr. Barnes went to a doorway opposite, and there he found written in blue pencil the word "up," whereupon he walked rapidly up town as far as the next corner, where once more he examined a doorpost, upon which he found the word "right," which indicated which way the man ahead of him had turned.

Beyond this he could expect no signals, for the spy shadowing the stranger did not know positively that his chief would take part in the game. The two signals which he had written on the doors were merely a part of a routine and intended to aid Mr. Barnes should he follow, but if he did so he would be expected to be in sight of the spy by the time the signal were reached. And so it proved in this instance, for as Mr. Barnes turned the corner to the right he easily discerned his man about two blocks ahead and presently was near enough to see Remington also.

The pursuit continued until Mr. Barnes was surprised to see him enter the park, thus carrying out his intention as stated in his interview with the detective. Entering at the Fifth avenue gate, he made his way toward the menagerie, and here a curious incident occurred. The stranger had mingled with the crowd in the monkey house and was enjoying the antics of the mischievous little animals when Mr. Barnes, getting close behind him, deftly removed a pocket handkerchief from the tail of his coat and swiftly transferred it to his own.

On the day following, shortly before noon, Mr. Barnes walked quickly into the reading room of the Fifth Avenue hotel. In one corner there is a handsome mahogany cabinet, containing three compartments, each of which is entered through double doors, having glass panels in the upper half. About these panels are draped yellow silk curtains, and in the center of each appears a white porcelain numeral. These compartments are used as public telephone stations, the applicant being shut in, so as to be free from the noise of the outer room.



Deftly removed a pocket handkerchief.

Mr. Barnes spoke to the girl in charge and then passed into the compartment numbered 2. Less than five minutes later Mr. Leroy Mitchel came into the reading room. His keen eyes peered about him, scanning the countenances of those busy with the papers or writing, and then he gave the telephone girl a number and went into the compartment numbered 1. About ten minutes elapsed before Mr. Mitchel came out again, and having paid the toll he left the hotel. When Mr. Barnes emerged, there was an expression of extreme satisfaction upon his face, and without lingering he also went out. But instead of following Mr. Mitchel through the main lobby to Broadway he crossed the reading room and reached Twenty-third street through the side door. Thence he proceeded to the station of the elevated railroad and went up town. Twenty minutes later he was ringing the bell of Mr. Mitchel's residence. The buttons who answered his summons informed him that his master was not at home.

"He usually comes in to luncheon, however, does he not?" asked the detective.

"Yes, sir," responded the boy.

"Is Mrs. Mitchel at home?"

"No, sir."

"Miss Rose?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah, then, I'll wait. Take my card to her."

Mr. Barnes passed into the luxurious drawing room and was soon joined by Rose, Mr. Mitchel's adopted daughter.

"I am sorry papa is not at home, Mr. Barnes," said the little lady, "but he will surely be in to luncheon if you will wait."

"Yes, thank you, I think I will. It is quite a trip up, and, being here, I may as well stop awhile and see your father, though the matter is not of any great importance."

"Some interesting case, Mr. Barnes? If so, do tell me about it. You know I am almost as much interested in your cases as papa is."

"Yes, I know you are, and my vanity is flattered. But I am sorry to say I have nothing on hand at present worth relating. My errand is a very simple one. Your father was saying a few days ago that he was thinking of buying a bicycle, and yesterday by accident I came across a machine of an entirely new make, which seems to me superior to anything yet produced. I thought he might be interested to see it before deciding what kind to buy."

"I am afraid you are too late, Mr. Barnes. Papa has bought a bicycle already."

"Indeed! What style did he choose?"

"I really do not know, but it is down in the lower hall, if you care to look at it."

"It is hardly worth while, Miss Rose. After all, I have no interest in the new model, and if your father has found something that he likes I won't even mention the other to him. It might only make him regret his bargain. Still, on second thought, I will go down with you, if you will take me into the dining room and show me the head of the moose which your father has been bragging about killing. I believe it has come back from the taxidermist!"

"Oh, yes. He is just a monster. Come on."

They went down to the dining room, and Mr. Barnes expressed great admiration about the moose's head and praised Mr. Mitchel's skill as a marksman. But he had taken a moment to scrutinise the bicycle, which stood in the hallway, while Rose was opening the blinds in the dining room. Then they returned to the drawing room, and after a little more conversation Mr. Barnes departed, saying that he could not wait any longer, but he charged Rose to tell her father that he particularly desired him to call at noon on the following day.

Promptly at the time appointed Remington walked into the office of Mr. Barnes and was announced. The detective was in his private room, and Mr. Leroy Mitchel had been admitted but a few moments before.

"Ask Mr. Remington in," said Mr. Barnes to his boy, and when that gentleman entered, before he could show surprise to find a third party present, the detective said:

"Mr. Mitchel, this is the gentleman whom I wished you to meet. Permit me to introduce to you Mr. Mortimer J. Goldie, better known to the sporting fraternity as G. J. Mortimer, the champion short distance bicycle rider, who recently rode a mile in the phenomenal time of 1:56 on a quarter mile track."

As Mr. Barnes spoke he gazed from one to the other of his companions with a half quizzical and wholly pleased expression on his face. Mr. Mitchel appeared much interested, but the newcomer was evidently very much astonished. He looked blankly at Mr. Barnes a moment, then dropped into a chair, with the query, "How in the name of conscience did you find that out?"

"That much was not very difficult," replied the detective. "I can tell you more—indeed, I can supply your whole past history, provided your memory has been sufficiently restored for you to recognise my facts as true."

Mr. Barnes looked at Mr. Mitchel and winked one eye in a most suggestive manner, at which that gentleman burst into hearty laughter, finally saying: "We may as well admit that we are beaten, Goldie. Mr. Barnes has been too much for us."

"But I want to know how he has done it," persisted Mr. Goldie.

"I have no doubt that Mr. Barnes will gratify you. Indeed, I am as curious as you are to know by what means he has arrived at his quick solution of the problem which we set him."

"I will enlighten you as to detective methods with pleasure," Mr. Barnes said. "Let me begin with the visit made to me by this gentleman two days ago. At the very outset his statement aroused my suspicion, though I did my best not to let him think so. He announced to me that he had lost his identity, and I promptly told him that his case was not uncommon. I said that in order that he might feel assured that I did not doubt his tale. But truly his case, if he were telling the truth, was absolutely unique. Men have lost recollection of their past and even forgotten their names, but I have never before heard of a man who had forgotten his name and at the same time knew that he had done so."

"A capital point, Mr. Barnes," said Mr. Mitchel. "You were certainly shrewd to suspect fraud so early."

"Well, I cannot say that I suspected fraud so soon, but the story was so unlikely that I could not believe it immediately. I therefore was what I might call analytically attentive during the rest of the interview. The next point worth noting which came out was that, although he had forgotten himself, he had not forgotten New York, for he admitted having come to me without special guidance."

"I remember that," interrupted Mr. Goldie, "and I think I even said to you at the time that it was significant."

"And I told you that it at least showed that you had been familiar with New York. This was better proved when you said that you would spend the day at Central park, and when after leaving here you had no difficulty to find your way thither."

"Do you mean to say that you had me followed? I made sure that no one was after me."

"Well, yes, you were followed," said Mr. Barnes, with a smile. "I had a spy after you, and I followed you as far as the park myself. But let me come to the other points in your interview and my deductions. You told me that you had registered as M. J. G. Remington. This helped me considerably, as we shall see presently. A few minutes later you took out your watch, and in a little mirror over my desk, which I use occasionally when I turn my back upon a visitor, I noted that there was an inscription on the outside of the case. I turned and asked you something about the watch, when you hastily returned it to your pocket, with the remark that it was an old family relic. Now, can you explain how you could have known that, supposing that you had forgotten who you were?"

"This is the gentleman whom I wished you to meet."

"Neatly caught, Goldie," laughed Mr. Mitchel. "You certainly made a mess of it there."

"It was an asinine slip," said Mr. Goldie, laughing also.

"Now, then," continued Mr. Barnes, "you readily see that I had good reason for believing that you had not forgotten your name. On the contrary, I was positive that your name was a part of the inscription on the watch. What, then, could be your purpose in pretending otherwise? I did not discover that for some time. However, I decided to go ahead and find out if I could. Next I noted two things. Your coat opened once, so that I saw pinned to your vest a bicycle badge, which I recognised as the emblem of the League of American Wheelmen."

"Oh, oh!" cried Mr. Mitchel. "Shame on you, Goldie, for a blunderer."

"I had entirely forgotten the badge," said Mr. Goldie.

"I also observed," the detective went on, "little indentations on the sole of your shoe, as you had your legs crossed, which satisfied me that you were a rider, even before I observed the badge. Now, then, we come to the name and the significance thereof. Had you really lost your memory the choosing of a name when you registered at the hotel would have been haphazard, a matter of no importance to me. But as soon as I decided that you were imposing upon me I knew that your choice of a [illegible] had been a deliberate act of the [illegible] one from which deductions might be drawn."

"Ah, now we come to the interesting part," said Mr. Mitchel. "I always follow a detective when he [illegible]."

"The name as registered—and I examined the registry myself to make sure—was odd. Three initials are unusual. A man without memory, and therefore not quite sound mentally, would hardly have chosen so [illegible]. Then why had it been done in this instance? What more natural than that these initials represented the true name. It is the most, in assuming an alias, common method to transpose the real name in some way. At least it was a working hypothesis. Then the last name might be very significant. Now, this man was a bicycle rider, I was sure. If he chose his own initials as part of an alias, it was possible that he selected 'Remington' because it was familiar to him. I even imagined he might be an agent for some kind of bicycles, and I had arrived at that point during our interview when I advised him not to buy anything until his identity was restored. But I was sure of my quarry when I stole a handkerchief from him at the park and found the initials 'M. J. G.' upon the same."

"Marked linen on your person!" exclaimed Mr. Mitchel. "Worse and worse. We'll never make a successful criminal of you, Goldie."

"Perhaps not. I shan't cry over it."

"I felt sure of my success by this time," continued Mr. Barnes, "yet at the very next step I was balked. I looked over a list of L. A. W. members and could not find a name to fit my initials, which shows, as you will see presently, that, as I may say, 'too many clews spoil the broth.' Without the handkerchief I would have done better. Next I secured a catalogue of bicycle makers, which gave me a list of their authorized agents, and again I failed. Returning to my office, I received information from my spy, sent in by messenger, which promised to open a way for me. He had followed you about, Mr. Goldie, and I must say you played your part very well, so far as avoiding acquaintances is concerned. But at last you went to a public telephone and called up some one. My man saw the importance of discovering to whom you had spoken and bribed the telephone attendant to give him the information. All that he discovered, however, was that you had spoken to the public station at the Fifth Avenue hotel. My spy thought that this was inconsequent, but it proved to me at once that there was collusion, and that your man must have been at the other station by previous appointment. As that was at noon a few minutes before the same hour on the following day—that is to say, yesterday—I went to the Fifth Avenue hotel telephone and secreted myself in the middle compartment, hoping to hear what your partner might say to you. I failed in this, as the boxes are too well made to permit sound to pass from one to the other, but imagine my gratification to see Mr. Mitchel himself go into the box."

"And why?" asked Mr. Mitchel.

"Why, as soon as I saw you I comprehended the whole scheme. It was you who had concocted the little diversion to test my ability. Thus at last I understood the reason for the pretended loss of identity. With the knowledge that you were in it, I was more than ever determined to [illegible]. Knowing that you were out, I hastened to your house, hoping for a chat with little Miss Rose as the most likely member of your family to get information from."

"Oh, so, Mr. Barnes!" said Mr. Mitchel, "to play upon the innocence of childhood. I am ashamed of you!"

"All's fair, etc. Well, I succeeded. I found Mr. Goldie's bicycle in your hallway. I took the number and name and hurried to the agency, where I readily discovered that wheel—No. 5000—is ridden by G. J. Mortimer, one of their regular racing team. I also learned that Mortimer's private name is Mortimer J. Goldie. I was much pleased at this, because it showed how good my reasoning had been about the alias, for you observe that the racing name is merely a transposition of the family name. The watch, of course, is a prize, and the inscription would have proved that you were imposing upon me, Mr. Goldie, had you permitted me to see it."

"Of course. That was why I put it back in my pocket."

"I said just now," said Mr. Barnes, "that without the stolen handkerchief I would have done better. Having it, when I looked over the L. A. W. list, I went through the 'G's' only. Without it I should have looked through the 'G,' 'J's' and 'M's,' not knowing how the letters may have been transposed. In that case I should have found 'G. J. Mortimer,' and the initials would have proved that I was on the right track."

"You have done well, Mr. Barnes," said Mr. Mitchel. "I asked Goldie to play the part of a nameless man for a few days, to have some fun with you. But you have had the fun with us, it seems, though I am conceited enough to say that had it been possible for me to play the principal part you would not have pierced my identity so soon."

"Oh, I don't know," said Mr. Barnes. "We are both of us a little egotistical, I fear."

"Undoubtedly. Still, if I ever set another trap for you, I will assign myself the chief role."

"Nothing would please me better," said Mr. Barnes. "But meanwhile, as you have lost in this little game, it seems to me that some one owes me a dinner at least."

"I'll stand the expense, with pleasure," said Mr. Mitchel.

"Not at all," interrupted Mr. Goldie. "It was through my blundering that we lost, and I'll pay the piper."

"Settle it between you," cried Mr. Barnes. "But let us walk on. I am getting hungry."

Whereupon they adjourned to Delmonico's.

THE RUB.

A Mean Trick.

"My husband played such a mean trick on me," said one woman to another on the street car the other day.

"How?" asked the friend sympathetically.

"Why, I found he was smoking 30 cents' worth of cigars a day, and I got him to agree to give me as much pin money a week as smoking cost him. He stuck to it one week."

"And then what?"

"He bought a clay pipe and a pound of 10 cent tobacco and cut my pin money down to 3 cents a week."—Exchange.

Explained.

Two friends, a weaver and a tailor, became in time enemies, so much so that the tailor spoke much evil of the weaver behind his back, though the weaver always spoke well of the tailor. Upon a lady asking the weaver why he always spoke so well of the tailor, who spoke so ill of him, he replied, "Madam, we are both liars."—Humor of Spain.

McKean County Miner.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.

Smethport, Pa., March 15, 1895.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

We are authorized to announce the name of John W. Campbell, of Kane, as a candidate for nomination for the office of County Treasurer, subject to the decision of the Republican county convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of James A. McKean, of Smethport, as a candidate for nomination for the office of County Treasurer, subject to the decision of the Republican county convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of Thomas B. Clark, of Bradford, as a candidate for nomination for the office of County Treasurer, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

THE murderer of Catherine Ging, Harry T. Hayward, was sentenced on Monday to be hanged, the day not being set.

A BILL was introduced in the State Senate last week to prohibit bicycles and tricycles from being used on the side walks.

THE members of the legislature of Indiana should wear sack cloth for ninety days, to partially atone for the disgraceful proceedings enacted during its closing session.

ANOTHER of Pennsylvania's sons has been highly honored. Hon. G. L. Shoup was re-elected to the United States Senate last week. Senator Shoup was the first governor of Idaho, and as such signed his own certificate of election to the United States Senate.

SIXTY citizens of Berks county presented a petition to the auditors of that county protesting against allowing the bill of the commissioners. The county officials had presented bills for from 295 to 304 days' service in the office. The citizens claim that the county business never before required more than 130 days, or not more than half the time taken up by the present board. There will probably be some surcharging in old Berks county.

DEMOCRATIC congressmen have gone home to manufacture campaign thunder for 1896. It will be necessary to invent an entirely new plan, as the last house has destroyed and annihilated the whole vocabulary. Well, they will have two years to invent something new and set it to music. It will be necessary to build a new platform, as the old one is kicked into smithereens. It will keep them busy and prevent them from dying of remorse. The Democratic party have been to Moscow and are now on the homeward retreat.

WHAT a howl went up from the Democratic press when the sessions of the 51st Congress closed and it was discovered that $988,000,000 had been appropriated. The 52d Congress, when Crisp became speaker, appropriated $1,037,000,000. The 53d Congress have made an appropriation of $1,015,000,000. The present Congress, being Democratic, has cut off $10,000,000 on soldiers' and widows' pensions, and yet they overran the billion dollar mark that the Democratic press made such a fuss about four years ago. The present party in power found it great sport to cry fraud and peculation during the Republican control, but what a difference they discover when they take hold of the plow.

THE name of Mr. Thomas B. Clark, of Bradford, Chairman of the Republican county committee, appears in the regular place of announcements in this week's MINER. Mr. Clark is a candidate for the honorable position of County Treasurer. As chairman of the Republican county committee for two years he is too well and favorably known to need any introduction from us to the people of this county. That Mr. Clark has been an able and efficient chairman goes without saying, as his efforts in that behalf have proved very efficacious in leading the party to wonderful victories. If he should be the successful candidate at the convention the MINER would take great pleasure in working for his election.

IN another column will be found an editorial from the Wellsboro Agitator on the State Senate bill No. 48, relative to water works in cities and boroughs. The MINER earnestly hopes that our representatives will do their utmost to defeat the obnoxious measure. If the above bill should become a law the cities and boroughs in the state would all be at the mercy of the water companies; in fact would be tied hand and foot. The companies could fix such rates as they chose, and the citizens would have no redress, as the borough officials could make no different arrangements for the reason, that first the council would be compelled to buy the whole plant and pay such prices as the water company saw fit to place upon their water works. Every tax payer should do his or her utmost to see that this unjust bill is defeated. Take the matter in hand and write to your representatives, and urge upon them the necessity of working to defeat the measure.

"IF THE people only knew what indignities they had to suffer there would be no Governor in Pennsylvania and Hastings would be fleeing for his life."—C. Walker's Butler Speech. This smacks of "the bleeding Kansas" times, when three reputable Democratic governors appointed by the President of the United States, namely, Reeder, Geary, both of Pennsylvania, and Walker, a pro-slavery Democrat from the South, had been compelled to flee from Kansas owing to the bitter pro-slavery sentiments of the Missouri ruffians that crossed over into Kansas and prevented free speech and honest government. The above out-law sentiment, expressed publicly in Pennsylvania in this enlightened day and age of the world, is uncalled for. There is no question but what the Governor was honest in his opinion when he signed the Marshall bill. The idea that our chief executive should be driven from the State because he had done what he considered right. The ravings of such men as Mr. Walker only shows how weak is their position. If their grounds were feasible there would be no necessity for so much bluster. In giving utterance to such demagogism they not only lower themselves in the eyes of all respectable people, but try to lower the standing of our great commonwealth and its chief executive.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 11, 1895.—A decidedly sensational proposition was made and discussed at a Washington dinner party which was attended by ten gentlemen, among whom were several who rank as leaders in the Republican and Democratic parties in Congress. The proposition came from a Democrat, and was in substance that the Republican House should as soon as it assembles, either in extra or regular session, adopt a resolution for the impeachment of Mr. Cleveland, because of the written and verbal contract he made contrary to law with that foreign syndicate for the sale of bonds. The source from which the information comes makes it impossible to use names. The proposer of the scheme stated very candidly that his party would stand a much better chance in the campaign next year with Stevenson as President than it will with Cleveland, and said that if all the Republican and Populist Senators would pledge themselves to vote for impeachment he would guarantee a sufficient number of Democratic votes to make the necessary two-thirds to impeach. No promises were made by the Republicans.

The fellow with "stern" reasons why Mr. Reed ought not to become Speaker of the House has again turned up in Washington. But his reasons are quickly "turned down." It is settled to the entire satisfaction of the Republican members of the House of the Fifty-fourth Congress, and also to that of the individual most concerned, that Thomas B. Reed will receive the nomination of the Republican caucus and be elected Speaker of the House, and it is altogether probable that at this very moment Mr. Reed is thinking about the membership of the House committees.

Representative Henderson, of Iowa, the ranking Republican member of the House committee on Appropriations, completed and made public a day or two ago a digest of the appropriations made by the last Congress and comparing them with those made by the four previous Congresses. The totals were as follows:

Forty ninth Congress		$746,342,495 51.
Fiftieth	"	817,963,857 80.
Fifty-first	"	988,417,183 34.
Fifty-second	"	1,027,104,547 92.
Fifty-third	"	990,338,691 04.

It will be seen that the two last Congresses, both Democratic, made the largest appropriations, and there should really be $21,686,764 added to the total appropriations made by the last Congress, as that is the amount that must be appropriated to pay contracts authorized, and Mr. Henderson estimates that insufficient appropriations for public printing, pensions, etc., will necessitate a deficiency appropriation of at least $1,500,000 by the Fifty-fourth Congress. The two last Democratic Congresses were both billion dollar Congresses, the first in the history of the country, although the Democrats made a national campaign by falsely calling the Fifty-first, or Reed Congress, the "billion dollar Congress."

Senator Platt, before leaving Washington, had a few words to say which should interest everybody and particularly Republicans. "The public is apt to expect," said Mr. Platt, "too much from the Republicans in the next Congress. The next house will be Republican, but we shall not have a Republican majority in the Senate and there will be a Democratic President. We shall be almost as powerless for the promotion of action in the next Congress as we have been in the last one. The opportunity for Democratic mischief has passed, but that is all. Little can be accomplished until after 1896, when we hope the Republicans will be in power in all branches of the government."

Is Secretary Gresham a coward or a ? This question is being asked by many who believe that Mr. Gresham is guilty of neglect of his sworn duty in not notifying the Treasury department that Germany, France and other continental European countries are unjustly discriminating against American products, in order that the law which directs that 10 per cent shall be added to the duties on all goods coming to the United States in vessels flying the flag of any nation which shall discriminate against our products. The law is clear, and to most people the discrimination against us is equally clear, notwithstanding the contrary claims set up by European diplomats. The Treasury department cannot impose the retaliatory duty until officially informed by the Department of State that the discrimination exists, and it seems that Secretary Gresham will not do that. It is said that he has intimated his fear of retaliating and that he favors accepting the thin excuses of the several European governments for shutting out American products. It is not surprising that "Oh, for one day of Blaine at the head of the State department!" should be so frequently heard these days.

THE American Economist says there is a loss to the farmers of $192,000,000 in the value of horses during 1894. The horses were affected by free trade blight.

DR. HARTMAN

Said in a Recent Lecture on Chronic Catarrh and Consumption.

Catarrh of the lungs is, ordinarily, known as consumption, also called tuberculosis. In those cases the catarrh has usually found its way into the lungs by the gradual extension of the disease from the throat through the bronchial tubes. Consumption is the natural termination of all cases of neglected chronic catarrh. Every one who is afflicted with chronic catarrh is liable to be attacked with consumption at any time. In the first stages of the disease Pe-ru-na is a sure cure; in the latter stages of the disease Pe-ru-na can be relied upon to produce great benefit, and in a large per cent. of cases produce a permanent cure. All those afflicted with this dread disease should begin at once the following treatment:

After all other means have been tried in vain; after doctors have pronounced the case hopeless and friends have given up in despair, after the patient has lost all faith and the incessant care of attendants seems futile, still there is hope in Pe-ru-na. Send for a free copy of Family Physician, No. 2, a complete treatise on chronic catarrh, coughs, colds, la grippe and consumption. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

A SNAKE IN THE LEGISLATURE.

The tax payers of the cities and boroughs of Pennsylvania should feel a deep interest in the fate of a bill now before the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, relating to water-works in such cities and boroughs. The bill to which we refer is known as the Senate bill No. 48, and it is evidently a "snake" of the most dangerous character. In its title it professes to give the local municipalities of the State authority and control over incorporated companies supplying water within their limits, and also to enable such municipalities to acquire the plants of such companies or a supply of water therefrom; but its real object is something far different, being evidently nothing less than to place the officers and taxpayers of every such municipality in which any water company may now exist at the entire mercy of such company.

The second section of this proposed new law provides that "before any city or borough shall purchase, construct, maintain or operate any water works or plant of its own, or procure water to be supplied to the public in any portion of its territory already supplied by any company incorporated for such purpose, such city or borough shall purchase or acquire the works and plant of such company." This clause of the bill practically prevents every such city or borough from procuring water for fire or any other purpose except on such terms as it may please the water company to offer. The rate offered by the company may be outrageously exorbitant, no matter—the tax-payers cannot help themselves. They must accept rates or go without water from any source, unless they are prepared to promptly bind themselves to purchase the water plant at such price as the managers of the company may choose to call it worth, or enter upon an expensive and protracted course of litigation to determine its value. This is the practical effect of the bill, and no doubt this is the sole object of its backers.

The oppressive operation of such a law is already demonstrated by the practical effect of the threatened bill at Beaver Falls in Beaver county. The people of that borough have been for some time suffering for want of a pure and adequate supply of water for domestic and fire purposes. This want became so pressing that at a recent election, out of a total of 1,393 votes, 1,331 votes were cast in favor of a better supply and new water works. In pursuance of this public demand the authorities of the borough have, for more than a year past, been engaged in making preparations for the construction of water-works for the use of the borough, and have expended several thousand dollars for the purpose of securing pure water. The people of that borough held a public meeting a few days ago to protest against this bill, which they say was introduced in the interest of a local water company which is so heavily bonded that it would be impossible for the borough to purchase its plant. If this precious bill passes, the people of Beaver Falls will be in fact absolutely prohibited by the law of the State from procuring an adequate supply of pure water for their own use and at their own expense! And every other borough in the State where such works are now established will find itself obliged to pay for water just what the managers of the company may be pleased to demand.

It must seem astonishing to any honest man that a "snake" of this nature could crawl through any Legislature, but it is a fact that this bill has already passed the State Senate and has been reported in the House by the Judiciary General Committee. That committee has graciously agreed to hear the opponents of this outrageous measure to-morrow evening, and it will be well for the authorities of every borough in the State to take prompt measures to protest vigorously against a measure that is evidently framed to place the tax-payers in the power of a lot of money making corporations.—Wellsboro Gazette.

A Chance to Make Money.

The times are hard, but there always seems to be opportunities for those who are willing to work. In the past month I have made $175 above all expenses, selling Climax Dish Washers, and have attended to my regular business besides. I never saw anything that gave as general satisfaction. One should not complain where they can make over $6 a day, right at home. I have not canvassed any, so anxious are people for Climax Dish Washers, that they send after them; any lady or gentleman can do as well as I am doing, for anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy. I think we should inform each other through the newspapers of opportunities like this, as there are many willing to work if they only knew of an opening. For full particulars, address the Climax Mfg. Co. Columbus, Ohio. After you have tried the business a week, publish the results for the benefit of others.

Buffalo, Wednesday, Mch. 13, 1895

Millinery Opening!

You are invited to the opening of our Spring Millinery. These "occasions" have rapidly acquired importance as the Millinery events of each season. People want to know what Barnes, Hengerer & Co. have to show. As a rule they postpone all purchases until this store has "opened out" its newest styles.

Our business is to produce and gather merchandise. In Millinery we emphatically do both. The results appear in displays vastly better than you'll see elsewhere. No equal stock can be found in Buffalo. Study, care, absorbing attention and money have been going into it for weeks and months. We never had a stock that pleased ourselves as thoroughly.

In order to emphasize the supremely good values, we shall sell this week,

—Ladies' handsomely trimmed Walking Hats at ... $2.00

—Ladies' Trimmed Hats, latest styles, worth $5, at ... $3.00

—Ladies' Black Lace Hats, perfectly new, worth $6, at ... $4.00

—Children's Trimmed Hats, newest shapes, special at ... $1.19

All through the department words of appreciation are expressed concerning prices. Prices are always a sore point in Millinery and we control the newest styles and latest novelties at the lowest prices of any store. Come and see! You can get the hat you want for less probably than you expect. An immense variety to choose from.

Barnes, Hengerer & Co.

C. F. Barrett, the miller, is a firm believer in judicious advertising. Since he placed his advertisement in the MINER his business has increased over half and his territory has spread wonderfully.

This week the MINER craves a little leniency from its many friends owing to scarcity of reading matter. The Commissioners' statement, triennial assessment and mercantile appraisement take up considerable space.

Mason says he is too modest to blow his own horn and advertise his prices in the papers. All he asks of the people is to call and get prices and be convinced that he is selling a better quality of goods for less money than most any other concern in the country.

—We regret very much to hear of the sudden death of Rev. Mr. Bronson, Sugar Grove, Warren county, Pa. Mr. Bronson was well and favorably known in this section, having been stationed at Farmers Valley for a long time.

—Spencer T. Stedman, of East Olean, committed suicide by hanging some time during Monday last. He lived with his son, who discovered his condition on Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock. Poor health is ascribed as the cause.

—The following patents have been secured through C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington: W. M. Harrison, Williamsport, lamp; J. N. Heally, Bradford, anchor well-packer; J. W. Holaday, Ridgway, furnace.

—Dr. Thomas L. Kane was presented with a fine baby boy Saturday evening and as all concerned are getting along nicely, he has every reason to rejoice over this important event.—Kane Republican. Happy doctor, but who is the donor.

—McKean county had 45 boarders in the western penitentiary in 1893 and 42 in 1894. At the beginning of the year there were 34 from this county, 8 received making 42, 15 discharged leaving 27, 25 males and 2 females. Total number in the beginning of 1895 was 1162.

—Pupils not absent during 6th month in Room 1 Smethport school, Miss Adda Burch, teacher, are Jozy Taylor, Myron Gallup, Carl Hector, Harry Sasse, Wesley Halliwell, Anna Halliwell, Viola Doerr, Ethel Voorhees, Elsie Sherer, Rena McCammon, Florence Cummings and Hazel Abby.

—That tri-weekly-seven-by-nine-two-streaks-of-rust-and-a-yard-wide road from Kane to Ormsby kept the B. B. & K trains waiting one hour and twenty minutes last Saturday night at Ormsby, and then failed to arrive. If a sunbeam strikes the track that train is stuck. "We will be happy, love, when summer comes again."

—The March number of Peterson's Magazine has an excellent cut of one of our Smethport ladies, of whom we are all justly proud. The picture does not come any where near doing justice to the original, yet it is so well executed that any one who knows the party can easily recognize Miss Sarah Amelia Scull.

—The Banjo Guitar and Mandolin Club of this village has secured the services of Madame Fanny Toy, of Bradford, as instructor, and will soon be ready to give a public exhibition of their proficiency. Madame Toy will be at the club room in the Specht & Sasse building every Thursday from 9 a. m. till 5 p. m.

—The Pierce Brock Oil company were busy on Wednesday making out and securing a lease of some land near the lower end of the dugway north of East Smethport, and will soon send another hole Chinaward. They are a determined lot of fellows and the MINER sincerely hopes they may find their best wishes realized in this new venture.

—Earl McQuiston was trying to place a big belt on a wheel at Blaisdell's kindling wood factory yesterday. His right hand was caught under the belt and he was twice whirled around the wheel. He escaped without broken bones, although his arm was badly bruised and he was injured slightly about the head and body. Dr. Stewart dressed his wounds.—Era.

—Thos. Q. Seabrooke will present "The Isle of Champagne," the famous comic opera, which has been played with great success in all the leading cities, on Tuesday evening, March 19th, at the Wagner, Bradford. The B. B. & K. will run an excursion train from Smethport to accommodate all who may wish to attend. Fare for round trip $1.00, special train returning after the show.

—The MINER is very much pleased to learn that John F. Keating has purchased the old Chadwick Hotel at Larabee. We are credibly informed that Mrs. Keating is one of the best landladies in this section and thoroughly understands the art of making the traveling public feel at home. A good house at that point will be highly appreciated by those who have business at that station.

—The St. Bonaventure base ball club is fortunate in securing the services of Herman Tull, of Smethport, Pa., who has entered the college and will pitch and play third base alternately with Ervin. Mr. Tull needs no introduction to Olean's base ball public, as his ability as pitcher and all round player and his gentlemanly conduct on and off the diamond, have won him many friends in this place.—Olean Democrat.

—One of the associate judges of Potter county, Consider Stearns, who has been a resident of that county since 1841, made two attempts to commit suicide last Monday. In the morning he tried to cut his throat with a razor, but was overpowered and disarmed. In the evening he swallowed a dose of Paris green, but the doctor used a stomach pump and his life was saved. This is but another proof that grip sufferers need close watching. Later.—He died Wednesday afternoon from the effects of the Paris green taken Monday night.

—Mrs. Sarah Kelly, who died at the county house last Friday at 7:05 p. m., was about 83 years of age. She was born in Ireland and came to this section over 40 years ago. Her husband had a farm on Prospect hill and lived there for a number of years. Misfortune overtook them and about the last of May, 1891, they were both admitted to the poor house. Her husband died a short time after being admitted to the county house. The funeral was held on Sunday, the remains being placed in the Catholic cemetery on Rose Hill.

—Mrs. F. E. Boylan died at her home in Simpson last Sunday, at the age of 26 years, from la grippe. Mrs. Boylan was well and favorably known in this section, which was well attested by the large attendance at the Catholic church during the funeral. The deceased leaves a husband and a bright little five-year-old son, who caused every one in church to shed tears when he plaintively began to call for his mamma. She had a brother living at Coleville, E. J. Hoover, and another, J. W. Hoover, residing at Lichburg. The funeral was held Tuesday forenoon.

—Last week a poor destitute boy, about 11 years of age, named Roy Kelley, whose father is dead and his mother married again, but he has lost all trace of her, came to the house of Will Hungerford, who took the little waif in and has given him a home ever since. Last Tuesday night S. E. Bell gave him a coat, vest and a pair of shoes, and some gentlemen chipped in and bought him a pair of pantaloons and socks, and now the little fellow is happy over Mr. Bell's kindness of heart. He was born on Vancouvers Island and has no home. He is a bright looking little fellow, appears to be honest and desires work to earn a living.

WANTED—Every smoker to send us seven two-cent stamps to help pay postage, packing, etc., and we will mail you a box of NON-NICOTINE MIDGET CIGARS. Only one box to one address.
Address, LANDIS & CO., Shippensburg, Pa.

—O. P. Boardman died at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, at his home in Olean, at the age of 85 years. The deceased was one of Olean's most highly respected citizens, an earnest Christian and a thorough temperance man. He is survived by his loving wife, who despite her advanced age, is still remarkably vigorous, and whose friends hope to keep her with them for many years yet. He also leaves a granddaughter, Miss Marcia Boardman, who has made her home with the aged couple and has been a comfort and support in their declining years. The funeral was held at their home at 1 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. The remains were placed in the Portville cemetery.

—Mrs. O. E. Haven died at her home, near East Smethport, last Sunday, at the age of 72 years. She was a woman highly respected by the entire community. Her maiden name was Eunice Lasher, of Norwich township. She was married in 1851. Her husband and three children survive her, two sons and one daughter, Mrs. Mittie Wilson, who lives in Pittsburg; D. L. Haven, living on the old homestead, and C. P. Haven. The funeral was held on Wednesday, the relatives and friends gathering at the house at 12 o'clock and then proceeded to the Union church at Colegrove, where the services were held at 2 o'clock. The remains were placed in the Colegrove cemetery. Thus has another good mother in Israel passed away to her final reward.

—Last Friday we had some doubts about being able to issue the MINER any more, as a man came rushing into our office in great excitement, exclaiming, "What in h— kind of business are you doing here? Didn't I pay you up?" with other expressions too numerous to mention, and he wanted the MINER stopped. It seems that he had received a bill from Mr. Rogers through Justice Ford, hence his great indignation. When he was sufficiently cooled down and we got his name and address, it was found that he owed us 40 cents, which he paid and left, considerably mollified. But it was a close call for the MINER. It looked as though we would have to suspend publication. However, the storm abated and we are still at the old stand.

—One of Olean's prominent citizens, John Dotterweich, died at his home there last Sunday. The Olean Times says: "Mr. Dotterweich was a progressive and enterprising young man, prominently identified with the interests of Olean upright and honorable in all his business and personal relations and his death is a distinct loss to the city. He was a modest and unassuming man and though frequently importuned to hold public office, never sought political preferment. He was a successful business man and leaves a substantial estate. He did much for the poor and many will hold him in grateful remembrance for his liberal but always unostentatious benefactions. He will be greatly missed and sincerely mourned by the community at large."

—Arthur Whaley was arrested Tuesday at Coleville, at the instance of Capt. Comes, for obtaining goods under false pretenses. It seems Whaley had given Mr. Comes a check for some cattle, claiming the check to be perfectly good, but which since proved to be worthless. Mr. Comes placed a warrant in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Davis, and he went to the home of Whaley's brother, at Coleville, who stated that Arthur was there in the morning but had gone away. A search of the house followed when King Arthur's court was discovered in a little attic, so small that it would be difficult for a cat to hide there. He was brought to Smethport Tuesday night and lodged in jail. His brother arrived Wednesday morning and settled with Capt. Comes and paid the costs, setting Arthur at liberty again.

Burglars in Town

Last Wednesday morning word came up from East Smethport that the safe at the depot had been blown open during the night and about thirty dollars stolen. The burglars had left their tools, consisting of chisels, crowbars, sledges, brace bits, etc. It was afterwards learned that the tools had been stolen from C. W. Lilgendahl's blacksmith shop. A short time afterwards there was great excitement in the corridor of the court house, when it was discovered that the Treasurer's office had been raided but they failed to get there. In prying the door open, they bursted the casings somewhat. The burglars pulled out the old Brennan safe that was blown open several years ago, and peaked into the hole, but found nothing. From here they undoubtedly went to East Smethport and raided the depot safe and then stole a hand car and run down to Larabee, when they were seen by the night operator.

The constable, of Keating township, Potter Co., arrested and brought over to the jail here four men who were suspected of being the parties that burglarized our town Tuesday night.

Pennsylvania Railroad's Second Tour to "The Golden Gate"

The large number of people who have leisure, and the growing desire of Americans to see the wonders of their native land, are the principal agencies in advancing a healthy sentiment in favor of travel.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company's personally-conducted tours to California will be conducted in all respects as those of preceeding years, with some added advantages, which cannot fail to attract the attention and enlist the interest of the tourist.

In addition to the high-grade accommodations and entertainment in transit, the Pennsylvania tourists are treated with the same liberality wherever the journey is broken. The choicest rooms in the leading hotels are always reserved for their use, for which regular rates are paid, so that the guests, although members of a large party, enjoy all the privileges of individuals who may have made their own selections.

The second tour in the 1895 series to the Golden Gate will leave New York and Philadelphia March 20, 1895, arriving at San Francisco March 29, and at New York and Philadelphia May 16, 1895.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411 Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at F. R. Foster's and A. B. Armstrong & Co.'s drug stores.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, who started from the eastern coast of Honduras about the middle of January to ride across Central America, has arrived at Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, from which place he will continue on to the capital of Nicaragua and from there to Corinto, on the Pacific side. From that point he takes a steamer south to Caracas in South America, crossing the Isthmus of Panama on his way. The ride to Tegucigalpa was made on muleback over the mountains and lasted sixteen days; the second half of the trip to Corinto will require about ten days more. Mr. Davis is accompanied by Mr. Henry Somers Somerset and Lloyd C. Griscom, and his purpose is to describe the places visited by these gentlemen and himself in a series of articles which will appear in Harper's Monthly and Harper's Weekly as soon as possible after his return to New York.

Interesting News From Various Localities Picked up by Our Regular Correspondents.

PORT ALLEGANY.

The revival meetings being conducted here by Evangelist Hathaway are doing much good. The vast church is crowded nightly and many souls are being brought to the Master. No revival of former years has created so much feeling or has been so productive as the one now in progress.

Mrs. P. Kilday, who was reported as convalescing in our last letter, has, we are sorry to say, suffered a relapse, and her condition is now considered as dangerous. Her sons, John and Frank, started for their home in the far west on Wednesday last.

Miss Agnes Leighton whose serious illness was reported last week, is now lying at death's door. Loving hands are ministering to her needs and loving parents and friends are praying for her recovery. At this writing there appears no ray of hope.

Last Thursday evening the residence of Mrs. F. A. Arnold, on Pearl street, was broken into and ransacked by sneak thieves while the inmates were at church. The burglars were evidently frightened away, as nothing of value was taken.

Mrs. Kate Lyman is suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia. Dr. J. B. Colcord is in attendance and hopes to have her about in a few days.

C. O. Dolley is confined to the house at present on account of stepping upon a rusty nail, which penetrated the foot and leaving a nasty wound.

F. W. Robinson and family, of Coudersport made a brief stop in town last Friday. They were en route for Hornellsville, N. Y.

Quite a number of Port Alleganians took advantage of the excursion rates to visit Olean last Saturday.

Paul Seldon started on Monday morning for Wyoming, N. Y., where he expects to secure a situation.

The board of trade met last Tuesday and elected a board of directors who are already on the war path.

C. J. Rice, of Friendship, N. Y., was in town last week, the guest of his sister, Mrs. A. M. Selden.

Mrs. A. A. Armstrong is reported quite ill with pneumonia. Dr. Colcord is the attending physician.

Mrs. F. D. Sherill, of Olean, is in town for a few days, the guest of relatives and friends.

W. A. Crosby, of Coudersport, was greeting acquaintances in town last Friday morning.

B. Roth is at Roulette this week, engaged in painting and paper-hanging.

MT. ALTON.

The largest lime social ever held in this town was at C. Graff's last Thursday evening. Our neighboring towns of Lafayette, Limestone, Ritersville and Gulley were well represented. The refreshments consisted of warm maple sugar, of which all partook to the number of 83. The company were so well pleased that they decided on Tuesday evening to repair to the hospitable mansion of Orland Hagadorn, at Lafayette, for an ice cream social.

Mr. F. C. Burns, one of the oldest residents of Gulley, left that place this week. He closed out all his property at auction last Friday, J. D. O'Connor buying the more valuable portion, two Jersey cows and the piano. Mr. Burns has not decided where he will locate, but the best wishes of a host of friends accompany his family wherever their paths may lead.

Last Saturday the school board went to Marshburg to investigate the charges made against their school by the "kickers" in that section. After carefully looking over the situation the board exonerated the teacher from all charges made against her, and we hope those interested Marshburgers are satisfied with the trouble they went to.

Last Friday evening about two dozen of the Rebekahs of Isabel Lodge went to Mt. Jewett to visit their sister lodge. It was near morning when they returned. They are loud in their praise of the fine time they had, and it is said the echo of their voices may be heard around the Gulley hill still.

Quarterly meeting services at the M. E. church here next Sunday commencing at 10 a. m. Rev. Tuck, of Custer City will have charge of the services. Quarterly conference Monday at 2 p. m., at which Presiding Elder Fancher will be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Graff, Miss Gertrude Chambers and Lloyd Canon drove to West Line last Sunday.

Mrs. Minnie Hyde of West Line is visiting friends here this week.

Mrs. B. J. Cain, of Bradford, was here last Saturday.

Prof. Cannon took a trip to Bradford last Friday.

Crosby Hive, L. O. T. M.

The following communication was received too late for publication last week.

CROSBY, PA., March 7, 1895.

You have not heard from Crosby Hive No. 57 in some time, so I will tell you that we are alive and wide awake. We are a Hive of live bees and are enlarging slowly, but we hope during the coming year to double our present membership. At our last review, held March 6th, we were visited by a delegation from Brown Hive No. 48, of Smethport, one from Port Allegany, and one from Coudersport. At the usual hour the review was held with an initiation of four new members to increase the number of our Hive, making a total membership of thirty. After review closed a lunch was served in the hall and taken all together it was an afternoon of pleasure and profit as well.

Come again, ladies, you will always find a welcome in Crosby Hive No. 57.

An All-Round Doctor.

According to a letter recently received by Dr. Van Waters from his brother in Seattle, there is quaint and original doctor located on one of the islands in the sound. He advertizes in posters and placards printed in a home outfit. In one of his announcements he says:—

"Legs and arms sawed off while you wate without pane."

"Childbirth and tumors a specialty."

"No odds asked in measles, hooping coff, mumps, or diarrear."

"Bald-head, bunions, corns, warts, cancer, and ingrowing toe-nailes treated scientifically."

"Coleck cramps, costiveness and worms nailed on sight."

"Wring-worms, polo evil, shingles, moles, and cross-eye cured in one treatment or no pay."

"P. S. Terms: Cash invariably in advance. No cure no pay."

"N. B. (Take Notis) No coroner never yet sot on the remanes of my customers, and enny one hiring me dount hafto be good layin up money to buy a gravestone. Come on come awl."

The writer adds that this man does a good business, although you wouldn't expect it, and his patients say he cures diseases, and does it thoroughly and quickly.—Stillwater Gazette.

It will pay you to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. With pure blood you need not fear the grip, pneumonia, diphtheria or fevers. Hood's Sarsaparilla will make you strong and healthy.

Heart Disease 30 Yrs!

Short Breath, Palpitation.

Mr. G. W. McKinsey, postmaster of Kokomo, Ind., and a brave ex-soldier, says: "I had been severely troubled with heart disease ever since leaving the army at the close of the late war. I was troubled with palpitation and shortness of breath. I could not sleep on my left side, and had pain around my heart. I became so ill that I was much alarmed, and fortunately my attention was called to

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

I decided to try it. The first bottle made a decided improvement in my condition, and five bottles have completely cured me."

G. W. McKINSEY, P. M., Kokomo, Ind.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

One More Store.

THREE years ago next May we took possession of our own new six-story building and said to ourselves "Plenty of room now for the next ten years."

We made a mistake.

Eighteen months later the great growth of our trade compelled us to annex the four-story store on the south. Then we said to our friends "We've room enough now certainly for five years to come."

Wrong again.

The marvelous increase in our business has compelled us to make arrangements to add still another store—this time on the north side of our main building.

The above picture, made from the architect's drawings, shows the new annex as it will appear when completed, which will be in time for the fall trade this year.

We believe that the secret of our success—and the only one—is our zeal in securing great lots of desirable goods and selling them for less than people really expect to pay when they come to the store.

A MEAN PIECE OF BUSINESS.

An Incident That Shakes One's Faith In the Chivalry of the Modern Man.

This is a bit of genuine scandal. Everybody likes scandal. It is always such a comfort to find oneself a little better than one's neighbor. This bit of scandal is true too. There is a young man now living in Chicago who used to live in Washington. He was engaged to a Washington girl, but rumors concerning her reached him out in Chicago. They said, these rumors, that she had gone out to supper after the theater, and looking on the wine when it was red had become just a little boisterous.

Her immaculate fiance came to Washington. He did not say a word to her of the rumors which had filled his soul with horror, but he took her to the theater and to supper afterward.

The Widow Cliquot was the third party at the supper, and the girl, like every other woman on earth, likes champagne. Her sweetheart urged her to drink, assuring her it would do her no harm whatever. She drank. In fact, she conjugated the verb to drink in more than one tense. She became unmistakably intoxicated. Then the gallant young man slipped her engagement ring off, bundled her into a carriage and took her home. She hasn't seen him since. Of course he couldn't think of marrying that sort of a girl, you know.

It is things like that that keep one's belief in the innate chivalry of the modern gentleman from dying. I understand the man considers it a tremendous joke, and you may be able to see where the laugh comes in. I am not.—Washington Post.

THE SMALLEST BOOK.

A Late Parisian Publication That Is Smaller Than a Postage Stamp.

The smallest book ever printed has just been issued by Messrs. Pairault of Paris. It is the story of Perrault, Little Hop o' My Thumb.

This diminutive volume contains four engravings, and it is printed in movable type. It contains 80 pages of printed matter. The book is 38 millimeters long by 28 millimeters wide. The thickness of this volume is six millimeters and its weight is five grams.

The "dwarf book" of the Chicago exhibition could be held on a postage stamp of the Columbian variety, but it is quite surpassed by this product of the French press. The little French volume, with its illustrations and its 80 pages of printed matter, is not much larger than a 1 cent piece.

It is a complete book in every respect, the binding being perfect, the pages duly numbered and the title page appearing with all the formality of the most dignified volume. The pages can only be read by the use of a microscope, but then it is found that the proofreading has been excellently done.

Several French swells are carrying these volumes inside their watch covers. A copy presented to a French library has been duly entered in the catalogue and placed on the shelves.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

TO SEARCH FOR DIAMONDS.

A Promising Field For Them Believed to Exist In Alaska.

From the Alaska News it is learned that John G. Brady, one of the most prominent citizens of Alaska, has a scheme on foot to explore Mount Edgecombe with a diamond expert and search for diamonds, which are thought to exist there. Late last fall a hunter and prospector brought in some brilliant looking lava ashes to Sitka and showed them to Mr. Brady. The latter sent them to an expert in San Francisco, who returned word that an investigation should be made at the earliest opportunity. The contents of that letter contained astounding information—pumice stone and scoria had all the elements for the presence of diamonds.

Mr. Brady has perfected plans to reach the extinct crater of Mount Edgecombe as soon as the snow and weather will permit, with the help of the expert, search the lava beds and pumice stone high and low, and will delve into the earth with searching scrutiny to learn if nature has had the elements there to crystallize carbon into its purest gem—the diamond. If they find diamonds on Mount Edgecombe, there will certainly be a rush of people to Sitka.

Suing For Damages From Spooks.

One of the most peculiar lawsuits ever filed in the United States is on the court docket at Crawfordsville, Ind. Three years ago a passenger train on the Monon route was wrecked near the home of John Elliott, north of the city. The train rolled down an embankment, and one coach was burned, five persons killed and 70 injured. The injured were taken to the house of Elliott. Now he wants $1,000 damages from the railroad because, he alleges, the health of his family has been bad ever since the wreck, and this is caused by the sound of groans from the injured that vibrate through his house every night, and when they go outdoors at night the "spirits" of those killed in this wreck can be seen walking up and down the track in front of his house. He wants all these things stopped and damages for the annoyance which has caused sickness in his family. He says he has dreamed about the wreck every night since it happened.—St. Louis Republic.

Mr. Cleveland's Money.

The president of the United States always uses new money. He never gets old notes, except in change when making purchases. His salary is paid him in installments of $4,166.66 each on the last day of every month, and the treasurer always makes it a point to send him notes of the latest issue. Mr. Cleveland, as his predecessors have done, keeps a private bank account with Riggs & Co. and makes a deposit regularly the 1st of every month, reserving enough from his salary to pay current expenses and setting a good example by putting the rest aside for a rainy day.—Chicago Record.

WANTS TO BE A SLAVE.

A Young Married Woman Who Refuses to Be Emancipated.

Very often when a young married woman starts housekeeping she is favored with a circular from the Women's Emancipation league as well as with various more or less tasty literature dealing with "sexual" matters from an advanced point of view. The Emancipators address her in this strain:

"Recognizing that the slavery of sex is the root of all slavery, and that injustice to womanhood, especially injustice within the family, is the perpetual source of all other injustice, it (the "league") seeks the legal, political, social and industrial emancipation of women, as the vital and indispensable condition of all other true lasting reforms, and affirms these claims as paramount to all personal, sectional or party consideration whatever."

I have a deep rooted aversion to slavery in all shapes. There are women slaves among us, as there are men slaves. When I find a woman slave, I shall be happy to assist in emancipating her. But this does not prevent my sympathizing with the writer of the following letter:

"Sir—I am a married woman—I think I may say girl—of three months' standing, just entered with joy and hopefulness upon what I have been taught to believe the highest and noblest duties of woman. It may be that my belief and my hopes are delusions; that I am no better than a slave, and that if I submit to the injustice in store for me I shall become a party to all the other wrongs in the world. But is it kind to tell me this just now? Mightn't I be left to find out my mistake for myself? When I do, won't it be time enough to join the Emancipation league? I think it would, so I am trying to keep my delusion and my annual subscription until I have I seen how my lord and master treats his unfortunate slave."—London Truth.

Quotation Marks.

"Quotation marks are not infrequently misused in signs," said a stroller, "the marks being placed about names, as, for instance, the name of a place, or about some descriptive phrase in a sign, though the word or the phrase may really not be a quotation at all, but I am never surprised at any misuse of quotation marks, for I cannot forget a very singular idea concerning them that I had myself in my earlier days. I used to think that single quotation marks about anything meant that the words inclosed were sort of partly quoted, more or less, whatever that may mean. Perhaps that isn't a very distinct statement, but I remember well that I was quite tickled when later I learned that quotation marks were not signs to be used at the fancy of the writer, but might properly be used only to indicate actual quotations."—New York Sun.
